

The Hot List

THE LATEST BUZZ-WORTHY COSMETIC TREATMENTS AND SKINCARE PRODUCTS TO GET YOUR SKIN LOOKING GORGEOUS ALL SEASON LONG.

Vintner's Daughter Active Botanical Serum

Vintner's Daughter founder April Gargiulo applied the fine wine making principles she learned from her dad to skincare for the creation of her first product, a singular face oil that has received some serious buzz in the beauty world. The product is made with all non-toxic ingredients, but uses the whole plant so every drop is dense with nutrients and actives that come from all the trace minerals found in the plant. "Women are moving toward naturals, but they're still going to turn to dermatologists for the heavy lifting," says Gargiulo. "The product happens to be non-toxic but has efficacy and is supportive of more aggressive treatments, such as lasers and other in-office treatments." ($185; vintnersdaughter.com)

This new pain-relieving vibrating tool is getting a lot of love on Instagram. The sleek looking device decreases discomfort during cosmetic procedures by distracting the pain sensors in the skin by both cooling and vibrating. "We apply it to nearby skin when injecting and the sensory nerves in the skin are distracted by the cooling vibration, masking the pain of the needle sticks," explains Dr. Rachel Nazarian, who has successfully been using it on patients coming in for fillers and Botox. "Many celebrities have been using it to make their cosmetic procedures more comfortable with their dermatologist, and I think our patients deserve the same VIP service!"

La Roche-Posay Active C10

Vitamin C has major anti-aging and antioxidant benefits. The new La Roche-Posay Active C10 is an ultra-lightweight cream clinically proven to reduce the look of fine lines and wrinkles, boost radiance and soothe skin. It contains La Roche-Posay's highest concentration of Vitamin C to help fight free radical damage that results from UV radiation and environmental damage.
